There are now vaccines to protect against two STDs – the human papillomavirus (HPV) and Hepatitis B (Hep B). HPV vaccines are available to protect against some of the most common types of HPV. The Hepatitis B vaccine can protect against Hepatitis B viral infection. There are many other STDs, but there is no one vaccine to protect against them all.

Get the Facts

»» Hepatitis B vaccine

The best way to prevent hepatitis B is by getting vaccinated. The vaccine is safe and effective. For adults, it is usually given as 3 shots within a 6-month period.

Learn More

»» HPV vaccine

Vaccines can protect males and females against some of the most common types of HPV. These vaccines are given in three-shot doses. It is important to get all three doses to get the best protection. The vaccines are most effective when given before a person's first sexual contact, when he or she could be exposed to HPV.

+ I just got tested and found out that I have an STD.

- We should get tested.

I want us to both be safe, so let's get tested for STDs together. Sometimes STDs have no symptoms, and I'd rather know for sure if one of us has an STD before we pass it on to each other.

I've looked into it, and it's pretty simple to get tested at a local clinic. Plus, most clinics offer free or really cheap testing for HIV and other STDs. I figured we could look up a local clinic on Sexetc.org and make an appointment together. I know I'd definitely feel better going if we were together. What do you think?

Avoid STDs, not the conversation.

1 in 2 sexually active people will get a sexually transmitted disease or infection – an STD/STI – by the age of 25 (and there is still risk beyond that). But the good news is that they are avoidable, manageable and definitely worth discussing. STDs are just one part of the story, learn more about your birth control options and deciding if you are ready for pregnancy.

HOW TO USE A CONDOM

Q: What do I do before putting one on?

1. Make sure the expiration date (printed on the condom) hasn't passed.
2. Open the condom package. Avoid damaging it with fingernails, teeth, or scissors.
3. Wait until you have an erection- if you put the condom on when you aren't hard yet, it might fall off.

Q: How do I put one on?

1. Put it on before you start having sex.
2. Pinch the tip of the condom, making sure that the ring is on the outside (it should look like a witch's hat more than a beanie).
3. While still pinching the tip, move the condom to the head of your penis so it's sitting like a hat on top of it.
4. While still pinching the tip with one hand, unroll the condom down your penis with your other hand.
5. If you're having trouble unrolling it, it is probably inside-out. Throw it away and start again with a new one.
6. Use a new condom for every act of vaginal, anal, or oral

FIND YOUR TESTING FREQUENCY

The only way to definitely know if you have HIV is to get tested. But how often should you test?

Are you a guy who has sex with guys?

Yes

No

How often you test for HIV depends on your risk. And your risk depends on the HIV status of the guys you have sex with, how many guys you have sex with, the type of sex you're having and other factors such as drug use and STD history.

So use this website to assess your risk and...

GONORRHEA

positive - you probably have it

Your gonorrhea test came back positive, meaning that you have gonorrhea in your reproductive system. You were not tested for gonorrhea in your throat or in your rectum (anus).

You need to:

- Get treated.
- Tell your partners so they can get tested.
- Get tested again in 3 months.
- Not have sex until you have been cured.

Get treated

Tell your partners

Set a reminder to get tested

Gonorrhea is a sexually transmitted disease (STD). You can get gonorrhea by:

- Giving a man who has gonorrhea oral sex ("head", "going down on a man")
- Having vaginal sex with a man who has gonorrhea (having a penis put in your vagina), whether or not he ejaculates (cums) - this is what usually causes gonorrhea in the vagina
- Having anal sex with a man who has gonorrhea (having a penis put in your anus/butthole), whether or not he ejaculates (cums)

CHLAMYDIA

negative - you probably don't have it

SYPHILIS

pending - check back in two days

Get treated

You should get treated as soon as possible. You will be given a shot and a pill.

Come back to Druid Clinic between 3:00-5:00pm on Monday, Wednesday, or Friday. You do not need an appointment. Tell the receptionist that you're there for treatment and you won't have to wait for long.

Tell your partners

As soon as possible, you need to tell any current partners to get tested and/or treated for gonorrhea.

If you don't, they will probably give you gonorrhea if you have sex with them again, even if you've already been treated.

You should also tell your past partners (anyone you might have given it to you or who you might have given it to) to get tested.

If you don't, they might become very sick or give gonorrhea to someone else.
